

This is done via Bayes Theorem, which says that the posterior distribution is proportional to the product of the likelihood and the priors:

$$p(\mu \mid x) \propto \text{likelihood} \times \text{prior} = p(x \mid \mu) \times p(\mu)$$

